ROALD DAHL

His parents were from Norway, but he was born in Wales, 1916. The family used to spend the summer holidays on a little Norwegian island, swimming, fishing and going by boat. When Roald was four years old, his father died, so his mother had to organize the trip alone for herself and her six children. At school, he was always homesick. At his first school, all the letters home were controlled by the headmaster. Afterwards at his next school, he had to wear a horrible school uniform. After school, Roald Dahl didn't go to university, but started to work for the Shell Company, because he was sure they would send him abroad. He was sent to East Africa, where he got the adventure he wanted: great heat, crocodiles, snakes and safaris. He lived in the jungle, learned to speak Swahili and caught malaria. When the Second World War broke out, he went to Nairobi where he was a fighter pilot. His plane crashed but after 6 months in hospital he flew again. In 1942, he went to Washington. There, he started writing short stories. Roald Dahl didn't only write books for adults, but also for children. In 1943, he published his first children's book "The Gremlins" and in 1945 his first book of short stories appeared in the US. His first marriage with the actress Patricia Neal was unhappy. His collections of short stories have been translated into many languages and have been best-sellers all over the world. His books are mostly fantasy, and full of imagination. They are always a little cruel, but never without humour. In his stories details are very close to reality. Roald Dahl died in November 1990.
